

Epilogue

Leila and Josh were finished. So was Gabriel. I remain, Ray High. Where this story was meant to end, in Chapter Twenty-three above, it has instead blurred onward into infinity like the back-to-front trail of an orbiting comet. The Method was born in a dream, where pliant ‘sitters’ comply with the strict and impudent demands of a composer who believes he can hear the music of the spheres. Now – I still straddle time – I look back to the moment when the experiment really happened. There was the author who saw me. There were the readers who became a part of the unfolding lives of the ‘Trio’ as I attempted to depict it in my unfolding, aimless, rambling account of their friendship. In the winter of 2005 and 2006 those readers (or might we call them sitters?) were
